

ACTION LUNCH SERIES

Please Talk to Kids About AIDS

a movie that can save lives

Thursday, July 12th, 2007

1:00 PM

DC CARE Consortium

1156 15th Street NW Suite 500

In the donor-fatigued, jargon-laden, taboo-filled world of HIV/AIDS, two innocent and innovative voices revive our understanding and compassion. By asking questions (“that only a child could ask”), two young girls get basic, honest, and fresh answers about the pandemic that defines our times. The result is a refreshing and thought-provoking documentary about our inability to make the epidemic understandable to all people because of our discomfort with issues of sex and sexuality. The fact that two kids can get to the bottom of it at the International AIDS Conference -- talking to experts, sex workers, cross-dressers and people living with AIDS-- is hilarious, hopeful and a little bit haunting . . . why have so many died because we can't talk about these subjects in an open and honest way?

Starring: Vineeta and Sevilla

Co-starring: Anthony Fauci – Director NIH Allergy & Infectious Diseases
Richard Horton – Editor-in-chief The Lancet
Laurie Garrett – Pulitzer-prize for The Coming Plague
Jose Esparza – Gates Foundation HIV vaccines
Kevin Decock – HIV/AIDS Director WHO
Helene Gayle – CEO/President CARE
Stephen Lewis – UN Special Envoy on AIDS
Craig McClure – Exec. Dir. Int'l AIDS Society

. . . and a cast of 25,000

Please RSVP to David Mariner at dmariner@dccare.org or (202) 223-9550 ext 15